The Sithi Project

The Sithi Project began in order to develop and implement collaborative and decentralized approaches to human rights advocacy in Cambodia. CCHR wishes to progress tactics for monitoring, documentation and information sharing, as a basis for an improvement in the situation of human rights – particularly civil and political rights – in Cambodia.

Sithi means 'rights' in Khmer.

Donors and Support

- The Sithi Project has been generously supported by:
  - United States Agency for International Development (USAID)
  - The Asia Foundation (TAF)
  - East West Management Institute (EWMI)
  - Deutsche Gesellschaft für Internationale Zusammenarbeit (GIZ)
  - Open Society Institute (OSI)
  - Interchurch Organisation for Development Cooperation (ICCO)

Why?

- The human rights situation in Cambodia continues to deteriorate.
- Cambodian citizens are regularly targeted, harassed, charged with criminal offenses and subject to politically motivated persecution for speaking out against oppressive government policies.

Garment Factories and Supply Chains

The map details a total of 616 garment factories operating in Cambodia; some factories do not have sufficient required information to be included in this research and thus the total number of factories is likely to be higher. The owners of these factories are based in Cambodia as well as from a number of foreign countries, including Australia, Bangladesh, Canada, China, France, Germany, Hong Kong, India, Indonesia, Ireland, Israel, Italy, Japan, Macau, Singapore, Spain, Sweden, Taiwan, Thailand, the Netherlands, the Philippines, the Republic of Korea, the United Kingdom, the United States of America and Turkey.
