Women Human Rights Defenders Project (WHRDs)
As community leaders or civil society activists, Cambodian WHRDs play a very important role in promoting, strengthening and protecting human rights.

While carrying out their work, women activists frequently face threats, violence and harassment.

WHRDs victim of abuses have experienced high level of stress and anxiety. A psychosocial support will be provided to those suffering from mental health problems.
Women Human Rights Defenders in Action
The Women Human Rights Defenders Project intends to:

- Protect WHRDs through the provision of appropriate legal, humanitarian, and psychosocial support.

- Empower WHRDs to advocate for their rights through trainings on advocacy tools and non-violent methods.
Project Activities

The Project will:

• Provide support to enable WHRDs to challenge the violations of their rights, remove themselves from high risk situations, and mitigate the impact of traumatic incident.

• Provide WHRDs with trainings on non-violent methods and advocacy tools.

• Provide training to CCHR’s Lawyers on women rights and the psychosocial impact of challenges they may face.

• Inter into dialogue with government authorities and other relevant stakeholders to push for policy changes.
In addition, the Project will:

- Collect qualitative and quantitative data, analyzes and findings on the experience of WHRDs in order to increase available resources, increase respect towards WHRDs.

- Conduct awareness raising activities to avoid stigmatizations of the WHRDs role and undue restrictions to their work.
